Men's Fall and Winter Suits

(Last Season's) Regularly $20 to $25, at $14.50

TRUE to the Smith Gray & Co. Standard, the Suits embrace every desirable weave. in solid Cheviot, Worsteds, Scotch Tweeds, sturdy Cassimeres—in neat checks and broken over weaves, in either single or double breasted styles. Fourteen-Fifty instead of $20 to $25.

We have never found it expedient to beat round the bush. These were left from last season. The ensuing season's styles, however, are marked by no appreciable changes—certainly not enough to justify such ripping reductions. It's our way, tho', and the advent of Fall must see them merrily on the way.

HUSBAND, WIFE AND BUTLER.

DR. RUSSELL WEARS SCARS OF BATTLE IN POLICE COURT.

Has Negro Arrested on Charge of Assault Then Breps Case-Mrs. Bussell Gets Susmeets for Him and Wants to Go On Magistrate Enforces Peace Bargain.

Dr. Herbert A. Russell of 180 East Nine senth street appeared in the -Yorkville plice court yesterday to accuse William ns, his negro butler, of assault. perpendicular mark over his left eye showed where a club had landed, a black spot under the right eye showed contact with a fist, a swollen nose was evidence of more violence, and various abrasions, tusions and lacerations all over the physician's face indicated that he had been brough a very warm time.

The complainant was a very small man. The negro was not much larger, but he d to be muscular. He showed no arks of a scrimmage as he stood smiling at the railing.

The complainant said, in applying for a warrant for his butler on Tuesday, that the negro had assaulted him with a club and with his fist when he tried to eject im from his premises. He further ex-lained that he had had a dispute with his wife about the butler. His wife ob-lected to the discharge of the man, he told Magistrate Cornell. He had determined to assert his rights and proceeded to put the objectionable servant out of the house. He did not carry out his intention in conse quesce of the alleged assault.

The effort at ejectment occurred last Friday and his explanation for not going to court until Tuesday was that he was busy at home applying tincture of arnica, and other things to his damaged face. The butler was arrested on Tuesday and taken to court, but the physician was not there and the examination was put down for yesterday. After his arrest, a saloon keeper appeared n court and bailed out th butler. He said sat in the back of the court. The physician's wife, her brother and her lawyer sat on a bench nearby. The physician took a seat up in front.

When the butler was finally arraigned, Dr. Russell stepped up on the bridge and said to the Magistrate:

"I have decided to withdraw this complaint, your Honor."

The Magistrate called up the negro and said to him as he discharged him:

"You want to be careful and not assault people. You are discharged because your employer doesn't want to prosecute you."

The negro left court. As he reached the door the complainant's wife left her seat and took him by the hand and walked out into the corridor with him. Her friends clustered about the two. The woman's husband got to the head of the stairs in time to see her clasping hands with the negro.

"This is a hitter nill to swallow but I

This is a bitter pill to swallow, but I 'spose I must swallow it," he said to a reporter.

He declined to make any explanations.

saying that he did not want any explanations, saying that he did not want any more notoriety than he had already obtained.

In a few moments all hands were back again in court. This time the wife and her lawyer stepped up on the bridge and the woman said she wanted to press her completing of some support.

the woman said she wanted to press her complaint of non-support.

"You came to me and told me that if your husband did not press the charge against the butler you would not press your charge against him," the Magistrate said to her.

"Yes, that's so," she replied.

"I will not hear your case now. If your husband does not support you, come to court and I will give you a warrant for him," the Court announced.

All hands again trooped out of court. When they reached the sidewalk the physician's wife, her brother and the negro started for Third avenue. Dr. Russell lit a cigarette, gazed at his wife and her companions and started toward Lexington avenue.

Today We Announce Our Greatest SEPTEMBER CHINA SALE

By Far the Greatest in Amount of Wares Provided Extraordinary in the Half-Price Lots Secured :: :

A year ago, after a tremendously successful month, we thought we had reached the limits of our facilities for a single month's selling in the contracted quarters provided for China and Glass Wares in this old Stewart Store. We congratulated ourselves that the next September Sale would take place in the New Building, and big selling records easily overcome.

This expectation was still held six months ago when the stocks were being bought for the present September Sale, which begins this morning-AND FIFTY PER CENT. MORE GOODS WERE BOUGHT THAN FOR ANY PREVIOUS SALE-in anticipation of having the entire Third Floor of our New Building in which to display and sell them.

The wonderful gathering of Wares is here-an assemblage that was the result of many months of extraordinary efforts by our buyers and the travelers who followed up the work of gathering-all done to make a stupendous success of the first sale in our new store.

The new store is not ready, and instead of being the first sale in the new building, these superb wares are to produce ferson Market police court yesterday by Detective George W. Cook and Henry Kretch on charges of disorderly conduct and assulting an officer. Cook alleged that the woman had turned upon him while he was taking her to the station house and had lacerated his face with her nails. His countenance appeared as if he had had a run in with a barbed wire fence.

After listening to the testimony of the two sleuths, Magistrate Steinert fined the woman $3 on the disorderly conduct charge and held her in $300 for Special Sessions on the assault charge. Then the woman let loose a torrent of French, and her agitated manner induced the Magistrate to call the let loose a torrent of French, and her agitated manner induced the Magistrate to call the interpreter. The interpreter gave her story to the Court as she told it.

"This man," and she pointed to Cook, "came to my house three weeks ago and obtained $50. My maid knew him to be a detective and gave it to him without a maurmur. Both of them came to my house again Wednesday night and demanded money. Then they took me out of the house and off to the station house. I fought them the best I knew how."

Magistrate Steinert made no comment as the woman finished telling her story, but said:

"Complaints against this woman are dismissed."

Seregent Farrell of the court squad

"Complaints against this woman are dismissed."

Sergeant Farrell of the court squad telephoned to Acting Capt, Robinson of the Tenderloin station, and the acting captain responded in person. The acting captain expressed the determination to clear up the case and said he would visit the Dupré woman to see if she would make a complaint against the officers. Cook was formerly chief of detectives for the County Medical Society.

Inspector Flood said last night that he purposed making a rigid investigation.

"I have been trying to beat into the heads of Tenderloin police," said he, "that I will not stand for monkey business. The other night a policeman placed before a disorderly house in West Thirty-ninth street failed to inform a man who was going in of the character of the house. When I learned about it I promptly gave that policeman another job."
